Caption
December 1, 2016 - New York, New York, United States: Christmas tree seller George P. Smith, from Brooklyn, selling Christmas trees to New Yorkers. Christmas trees vendors in New York City sleep for weeks in trucks and vans near stands of $50-$1,000 firs, which must be manned 24-hours a day to prevent theft. They work long cold hours outside, selling trees shipped in from farms in Canada and North Carolina. At the end of the month, most of them earn $2,000-$6,000, working as subcontractors for local companies. (Matthew McDermott/Polaris) (FOTO:DUKAS/POLARIS)  Local Caption  05684234
