Wohnen und heiraten unter einem Dach: Amanda McFarlane bewohnt die alte Kirche in Bow of Fife / 121018  The Old Church in Bow of Fife, Fife, Scotland, where owner Amanda McFarlane, has seen five generations of her family, including her, marry in the church she now owns. Collect of Amanda McFarlane's dad and mum's wedding, Moyra Smith and William Blyth in the church in 1959. See SWSCchurch; A woman has spoken of tying the knot in the converted church she lives in - and where five generations of her family got married. Amanda McFarlane, 55, wed husband Sandy, 63, in the same building where her mother, aunt, grandmother and great-great-grandmother all walked down the aisle. And Sandy's son Rennie McFarlane, 33, continued the tradition when he wed wife Kelly, 35, in the family home in 2013. In 1959, Amanda's mother Moyra Smith walked down the aisle in what was then a church, to exchange vows with Amanda's father, Scott Blyth. And grandmother Betsy Robertson Scott wed her husband William Clark Blyth there in 1927.  Local Caption  / action press
