Exclusive - Fugitive ex-oligarch Andrej Borodin's £140m 18th century Grade II-listed mansion

The sprawling 55,000 sq foot abode was once the most expensive in the UK when it was purchased by the former President of Bank of Moscow in 2012.

The luxury property, which backs on to the River Thames, boasts has a helipad, spa complex, home cinema, high-tech security system and polo facilities.

The house, built in the Renaissance style, also has at least ten bedrooms complete with en suite bathrooms, and a whopping 30,000 sq ft of living space.

Borodin, who resides at the stately home with his model wife Tatiana, fell foul of the Kremlin after being accused of fraud by the Putin administration in 2011, and was granted political asylum in the UK in 2013.
