Protestors demonstrate in Paris, France, on September 18, 2025, during a day of nationwide strikes and protests called by unions over France's national budget. France braces for a day of nationwide protests on September 18, 2025, with a source close to the authorities saying some 800,000 people are expected to take to the streets. In a rare show of unity, trade unions urge French people to strike in protest at the authorities' "horror show" draft budget designed to reduce France's ballooning debt.
