

FEATURE - Eichhörnchen an den eigenen Olympischen Spielen

Reference

DUK10144361_024

Title

FEATURE - Eichhörnchen an den eigenen Olympischen Spielen

Creation date

20210716

Caption

Ready for the Olympics? These sporty squirrels certainly are.

These hilarious images are the work of animal photographer Geert Weggen.

He creates quirky scenes by placing tiny props and getting garden squirrels to interact.

The 52-year-old from Bispgården, Sweden, explains: "For many years I did not see big sport events, but when the Euro football tournament was almost towards an end, I started to see some matches and liked it. But it was too late to do a squirrel series and so I thought that I would do an Olympic series instead, because I had about 3 weeks left for this event.

"There about 10 different squirrels, both young and old ones. To make them trust me, most of the time I move slowly and be very quiet. I show up often so that they get used to me. Also, in not giving them attention sometimes and doing other things, that can make them curious. And food helps, of course. When they understand that I am the one putting out food, the trust comes easier.

"I would say the boxing set-up is my favourite. I had this idea for years and made the props and bought the gloves many years ago, but never started to work at it I never saw this idea before in photography, and that made my choice."

Where: Bispgården, Jämtland, Sweden

When: 16 Jul 2021

Credit: Geert Weggen/Cover-Images.com

MANDATORY CREDIT: Geert Weggen/Cover-Images.com. Only for use in this story. Editorial Use Only. No stock, books, advertising or merchandising without photographer's permission
(FOTO: DUKAS/COVER IMAGES)

Special instructions

(c) Dukas

City
Bispgården
Credit
DUKAS
Source
COVER IMAGES
Author
Original references
covering41599794