Pictures must credit: Bitmolab A new iPhone case gives the in-demand gadget a retro look — as a gaming console. Called the GameBaby, it is reminiscent of Nintendo’s Game Boy. The case consists of two parts that attach to the handset. When used purely as a case, both parts attach to the back. To turn it into a controller, the lower part is flipped to the front. This part has built-in physical buttons that transform the device into a retro gaming hand-held. It has been designed by Hong Kong based Bitmolab to fit an Apple iPhone 15 Pro Max and the newly announced 16 Pro Max. The configuration supports Game Boy basic plus its Colour and Advanced variants as well as Nintendo NES. Picture supplied by JLPPA
