People walk and visit the restaurant terraces located in the Las Ramblas district of Barcelona, Spain, on July 12, 2025. The Catalan capital experiences one of its hottest summers of the last decade, with temperatures exceeding 30 °C. This phenomenon transforms the rhythm of the city: the beaches fill up from early morning, tourists seek shade in the narrow streets, and locals opt for ventilated terraces and evening hours to cope with the heat. The heat marks a vibrant but challenging season for those visiting Barcelona this summer. (Photo by Jorge Mantilla/NurPhoto)
