Northern Lights and Eruption glow by Stefan Brenner

A photographer captured these amazing photographs of the Northern Lights coupled with the colours of an erupting volcano.

The photos not only show the vibrant display of the Lights but also show the orange glow from the continuing Holuhraun volcano eruption.

Software engineer Stefan Brenner, 31, who took the photos, said: "I travelled more than 9,320 miles (15,000km) through all parts of Iceland to see the Northern Lights.

"I really love them and cannot get enough of them. I've seen them when they have been extremely strong two times now when the sun activity was very high.
