

Reference

DUK10014921_022

Title

FEATURE - Wifi kommt nach Kuba

Creation date

20151229

Caption

MANDATORY CREDIT: Valerio Berdini/REX Shutterstock. Only for use in this story. Editorial Use Only. No stock, books, advertising or merchandising without photographer's permission
Mandatory Credit: Photo by Valerio Berdini/REX/Shutterstock (5540836c)

A woman stares at her smartphone screen in Parque Fe del Valle, Havana, Cuba, on the evening of 29 December 2015. The fascination of people towards touchscreen remind the way people look at mirrors, in a way emphasizing the narcissistic aspect of solitary wireless interaction
Wi-Fi comes to Cuba, Cuba - 2015

FULL COPY: <http://www.rexfeatures.com/nanolink/ruif>

A photographer has captured a series of striking images of Cuba's Wi-Fi 'Revolution'.

Photographer Valerio Berdini captured a series of images that show Cuban faces illuminated by mobile phone light, as many browse the internet on their mobile phone devices for the first time.

In June 2015 Cuban citizens gained access to Wi-Fi for the first time when Cuban government-owned telecommunication company, ETECSA, began installing 35 Wi-Fi hotspots in the parks of the main cities.

Until that date the web in Cuba was an affair limited to the guests of few luxury hotels and some official state offices.

(FOTO:DUKAS/REX)

Special instructions

(c) Dukas

City

Credit

DUKAS

Source

REX

Author

/ 5540836c

Original references

5540836c