

FEATURE - Ruderunfall mit Entenküken in Cambridge

Reference
DUK10026367_011
Title
FEATURE - Ruderunfall mit Entenküken in Cambridge
Creation date
20160610
Caption
Mandatory Credit: Photo by Geoff Robinson Photography/REX/Shutterstock (5729165k) The moment a duckling was decapitated by a rowing crew at the Cambridge University May Bumps on the River Cam Duckling killed by Cambridge University rowing crew, UK - 10 Jun 2016 *Full story: http://www.rexfeatures.com/nanolink/sfi5 Callous Cambridge University students DECAPITATED a baby duckling as they took part in their May Bumps college races. Hundreds of spectators looked on in horror as the eight-strong crew rowed right through a family of ducks on the River Cam - killing one of them with their oars. The student rowers were heading to the starting line of the annual 200-year-old event on Friday (June 10) when the mother duck and her 10 babies swam past. Onlookers, who were watching from the river bank, yelled at the college team to move out of their way, but instead the rowers ploughed straight through the feathered family. The baby ducklings became tangled in the oars and one of the brood was killed as the rowers raced ahead. (FOTO:DUKAS/REX)
Special instructions
(c) Dukas
City
Credit
DUKAS
Source
REX
Author
/ 5729165k
Original references

