Thousands of Southern passengers suffered more strike misery today as a union warned of more stoppages to come and said a peace deal was a universe away. The bleak assessment on the 31st day of strike action to hit the beleaguered railway came as almost all services were halted for 300,000 people. Battered commuters tried to beat the strike by trekking to nearby lines run by other rail companies - only to be met with huge queues. Pictured : Wimbledon station.
