

FEATURE - Schnee in der Sahara

Reference

DUK10050300_021

Title

FEATURE - Schnee in der Sahara

Creation date

20170120

Caption

Mandatory Credit: Photo by Geoff Robinson Photography/REX/Shutterstock (7936292q)

The snowfall in The Sahara Desert town of Ain Sefra this morning

Snow in The Sahara - 20 Jan 2017

The SAHARA Desert has had the biggest SNOWFALL in living memory after a freak winter storm this morning (Fri) - just days after 2016 was found to be the world's warmest year ever. Photographers have taken incredible pictures this morning of ONE METRE deep snow covering the sand in the small Saharan desert town of Ain Sefra. The town saw a sprinkling of snow just before Christmas, when a few flakes settled on the red sand dunes of the world's hottest desert for the first time in 37 years.

But today the snow has been falling steadily and is now waist deep in some parts of Ain Sefra, which is known as "The Gateway to the Desert." The snow has caused chaos in the town, with passengers stranded on buses after the roads became slippery and icy.

(FOTO:DUKAS/REX)

Special instructions

(c) Dukas

City

Credit

DUKAS

Source

REX

Author

/ 7936292q

Original references

